A Guide To The Hidden Realms Of Thought, Belief, Prayer, Intercession, And Being

Preface

*“But all things that are reprov’d are made manifest by the light:
for whatsoever that makes manifest is light. Therefore He says,
Awake oh sleeper,
arise from the dead
and Christ shall give you light.”*
---Ephesians 5:13-14<sup>1</sup>

The purpose of this writing is to free the spirit, by revealing the “unseen things” of the spiritual realm through education of the mind. This is revelation knowledge. It cannot be detected by the five physical senses. Those who demand scientific proof may stop reading now, as you will not find this within the following pages. The only reason that “scientific proof” is not available is that I have not found any physical elements that enable me to weight the following spiritual insights. I can understand and convey these insights and experiences in a way that the mind can encompass them, but I have yet to discover any methods of mathematics, science, or quantum physics that can define them. Perhaps I never will discover a method among the five physical senses, but the intellect and imagination can grasp this truth when aided by the spirit. I see no reason to wait until I can scientifically prove what I have encountered since the minds of others can immediately conceive and so receive the benefits of my experience. Columbus didn’t wait to set sail “after” the world was proven to be round. He set sail when the world was thought to be flat.

Those who understand and even exercise the “multi-senses” beyond the five physical senses, may want to continue reading. This material is of a “spiritual” nature and in order to understand it, you must be willing to activate your own spiritual senses, and to cultivate these within the vast recesses of your mind.

I am not an “expert”. God alone is the author and creator of the marvelous realms of the unseen. I am a man, simply on a journey through this temporary life to a place and state of being that is infinite. I do not know all of the lands, or all the knowledge. I only know, and have been shown---the way to the Father. In this journey, which I have not chosen, but which the Father has chosen for me, I have been able to learn some things. I have observed how many things “work”, and how they interact. I have seen how people can be affected and even controlled by unseen forces. I have seen lives destroyed needlessly through a lack of knowledge of the truth.

Years ago, I began studying medicinal herbs. I read about their healing properties and studied every book I could get into my hands. I looked at photographs and drawings and longed to see and handle the actual herbs. I would go off into the woods hoping to find the herbs but for a long time could not find them. I had no “teacher” to guide me in my pursuits. One day while driving through a wooded area on an old dirt road, I spotted yarrow growing alongside the road. I slammed on the brakes and jumped out of the car to get a firsthand look. As soon as I got up close to it, I realized that I had actually seen this plant many times before. In fact, I realized it had been growing in my yard for years and yet I had not recognized it! From that point on, I began to find the herbs I had been searching for everywhere! I got as many seeds as I could find and afford and began to plant gardens of herbs everywhere I had space. The herbs that at one time I could not even find, I now notice as my car whizzes down the road at high speeds. I can even spot plants growing on distant hill sides.

Just as finding that one plant, accelerated my knowledge and experience of herbs, one encounter in the spiritual realm can accelerate your knowledge of the unseen. What you must be willing to do, is to exercise perseverance and cultivate your own spirit. Just as I planted herbs and enjoyed their beauty as well as the harvest, you can begin to develop and cultivate your spirit.

The process is simple, but it takes time and commitment. You must be willing to collect “seeds” of truth, and then plant these in your spirit. You have to allow the “seeds” of truth to sprout and grow within your spirit. You must then tend the tiny “plants” of truth that result, like you would tend a very special garden.

It’s the garden of yourself. A garden where you must “weed out” any false ideas, beliefs, and attitudes. A place where you allow nothing but truth to grow. A place where the Spirit of God can dwell within you.

One encounter with the truth of the spiritual realm can accelerate your growth and understanding. This has happened to me many times over the years. I encounter some spiritual dynamic and suddenly I “see” and “sense” that same dynamic all around me in every situation. I find that I begin to understand this dynamic and how it frees, influences, or even controls people.

The process of continual spiritual insights and encounters has been my journey and my experience. This writing is about those journeys and experiences. It is my attempt to communicate what I have seen and experienced in the unseen realms. It is a book about truth and faith. Truth is part of the nature and character of God, and faith is the substance of the unseen spiritual realm. This is a book about the nature and character of God as I have come to know Him and as He has revealed His creation to me.

Walk with me now in spirit, and I will show you what I have “seen” and what I have learned; and perhaps, my adventures will in some way enrich and benefit you...

A word to the skeptics. I remember as a young boy, watching the moon landing on television. It was exciting as I was always interested in the exploration of space, the oceans, and in medicine. The black and white picture of the TV screen made the moonscape look very cold and too dark on the horizon. It was foreign and a little scary. I had followed the Apollo space program, built model spaceships, and even visited the NASA Space Center.

I also loved science fiction, because it transcended the boundaries of what was currently possible and allowed me to explore either real or imagined places with my mind. I was Captain James T. Kirk at Halloween, trick or treat, but I was not a “trekkie”. I knew that Star Trek was a TV show and I still enjoy watching it like I enjoy reading a good fiction novel. Still, as a young boy, I was Captain Kirk, and I was “Mike” in Sea Hunt and I was even Dr. Ben Casey. My back yard was the ocean floor, complete with sea monsters. It was also a galaxy of other planets with alien invaders that I had to fight off. Our pet dogs were never sick as long as Dr. Ben Casey was there for any emergency. Their regular dog food was transformed into miracle cures and this “medicine” was feed to them regularly; and you can conceive that they enjoyed playing with me for this reason.

I do have a very good imagination, but I am grounded in reality. I enjoy “fiction” and “play”, but I know what is “real” and what is “imagined”. With this, I can make the confession that I firmly believe that our astronauts landed on the moon and returned to the earth. I have never met any of these astronauts. I have never ridden in a space craft. I have never been to the moon, but I still believe that the space program has sent the astronauts there.

If I were to be skeptical and go to NASA and demand proof of the moon landing, they might offer me tapes of the landing or even allow me to talk to the astronauts personally. (Actually they would lock me up as a “lunatic”---pun intended---and throw away the key, but stay with me on this....)

But let’s say that I’m not satisfied with tapes or people who “say” that they have been there. If NASA can’t take me to the moon and let me walk there, and if they can’t take me right now, then I don’t believe that anyone has ever been to the moon.

You can easily see the problems with this kind of demanding thinking. “Prove it to me, now, or it doesn’t exist.” This line of thinking presents problems. What if there is currently no space craft built? What if the “window” where space launches are planned, is not there? If a launch occurs outside the launch “window” the space craft would veer off into deep space and be lost forever! It would never reach the moon. What about training? Could I pass the training that is necessary for a space voyage to the moon? Even if I was only a passenger, I would still need to learn some safety and emergency measures.

NASA might bring any of these situations to my attention and explain that they could not take me to the moon at this time. These are valid reasons. Preparations would need to be made, and conditions would have to be right for a launch to occur.

The purpose of this discussion is to point out that many skeptics have the attitude that if you can not prove it to me now, if you can’t duplicate the experience on command, then I don’t believe it, and if I don’t believe it, then it isn’t true.

As I stated, I believe that men landed on the moon, but if I adopt the same skeptical mindset of “prove it to me and prove it now”, then I too would become a skeptic. I would limit any possibilities of ever experiencing anything beyond what I could experience on command.

This is a dangerous mind set because this universe operates in cycles. Some things are only possible at certain points in the cycle. For example, you can plant tomatoes in the snows of February, but you will not get any tomatoes! Why? Simple, the plants will freeze and die before they produce. Take the same plant and wait until May to plant it, and barring any major frosts (another cycle) you will have tomatoes in about two or three months. Planting in February does not warrant a “disbelief in tomatoes”. Planting in February demonstrates a lack of understanding of the current points of the cycle (the seasons of summer, fall, winter, and spring). People can live as neighbors and one can disbelieve in tomatoes, while the other enjoys tomatoes all summer long!

The disbeliever demands that the cycle “produce on demand”, and the believer studies and works with the cyclic pattern and enjoys the harvest! Both live side by side, experience the same conditions, but have different perceptions of, and interactions with, those same conditions, and so experience different results.

The point that I am making here is, that if you adopt the attitude of “prove it to ME and prove it now”! You may limit the possibilities of your experience. If you want to be skeptical, then do so. Expose the lies and the frauds who tell them! But in your journey, do not be so small minded as to exclude the journeys of others. Do not “demand” with arrogance that you are the measure of all things, and that all things must meet with your standards before you are willing to explore their potential existence. Do not condemn the cyclic patterns that do not move at your beckoned call. Instead ask yourself if you are willing to study these patterns on their terms? Ask yourself if you are willing to observe conditions for long periods and to change or alter your thinking to include the possibility of something that can not be experienced by the intellect or the five physical senses? Journey into new territory!

In this book, I will be introducing some new terminology. Since I have found little or no writings on some of the subjects discussed, I have “coined” certain phrases and given names to what I have experienced. It is my hope that no one will be “offended” by these terms that I have given to certain spiritual realities. It is also my hope that no one will be offended by the topics I discuss, and that no one will call what I explain as being “unscriptural” or “occultist”.

Much of what I am writing has been revealed to me through the “gift” of the “discerning of spirits”. (See 1 Corinthians 12)<sup>ii</sup> If I had to define, simply, the gift of the discerning of spirits, I would have to say that it is the gift of “awareness” through “connection”. It is a gift where a person is able to connect to another person or thing and “read”, or become aware of its true nature, character, and intent. It is a way of gaining insight and knowledge that is not accessible through the five physical senses. This is not “new” knowledge or truth but is an aspect of that same knowledge and truth that has been lost or distorted over the centuries.

This writing is my attempt to “set the record straight” and unravel some of the mysteries of life, and of the afterlife. It is my undertaking to expose some of the false ideas about God and His Word to us. What you are about to read, is based in scripture, but bare with me through some explanation. This is not a “new gospel” but is a clarification of the original one. God has been given a “bum rap”! He has been viewed for centuries as a vengeful God Who is ready and waiting to throw His thunderbolts at us and who delights in sending us to the fiery pits of hell! This is how the mind apart from God’s Holy Spirit reads the bible. To the intellectual mind, the bible is just a book of “fables” and contains nothing but inconsistencies. But for those few who allow the Holy Spirit of God to enlighten their hearts and minds, the bible is a love story of a caring Father, in search of His children.

And now, I give you a word of caution. There is information within the following pages that a dark force does not want you to have. This dark force would do anything within its power to keep this knowledge away from you. It may be at work already within your mind. Silent but forceful, it lurks within the dark recesses of twisted attitudes and beliefs. This dark and evil force would like nothing better than to ease you into a deep sleep and cause you to “miss” the following truth and so “not share” in the prize of reward that it carries.<sup>iii</sup> This sinister force would prefer that you remain blind and fearful of the following discussion. This evil would like nothing better than for you to turn your head away from this truth or even to call it blasphemous.

As long as this adversary can keep you in ignorance of the following truth, he can control and influence you; “steer” you in any direction he chooses, and all without your conscious awareness of his actions. This entity, and those who follow him, do not want you to understand with clarity, how they are able to affect the way that you think and what you believe.

In the following pages, I have pulled back the curtain that separates spiritual and physical realities so that hidden things can be revealed. I have no doubt that many readers will encounter these realities for the first time in this writing. I caution the reader not to make a quick judgment of these writings, particularly in the first six chapters, but to examine the work as a whole. These early chapters may be Disturbing or new information to you, but they must be considered in light of the later chapters to Understand their inclusion within this material.

The purpose of this writing is to reveal information that can free the reader from oppression of which he may not even be aware. This material is intended to free the spirit, by revealing the “unseen things” of the spiritual realm through education of the mind. This is revelation knowledge. It can not be detected by the five physical senses. If your idea of Christianity is sitting in church on Sunday morning and analyzing the message of the priest or pastor, then this book is not for you. This is not material for the squeamish or for those religious folk who are “set in their own ways”.

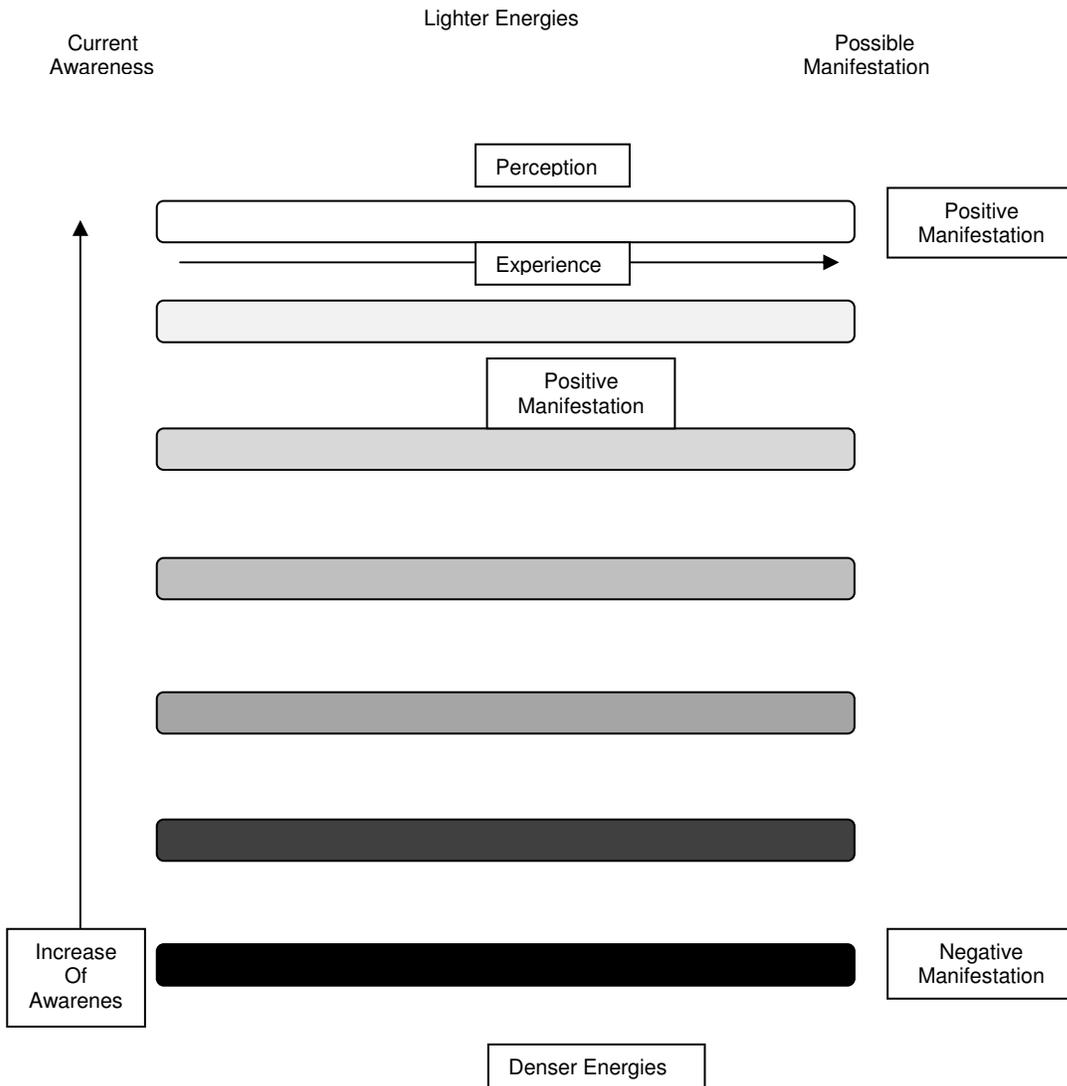

If you are a person who is hungry for the deep things of God then this book is for you. God’s prophetic word to me many years ago is unchanged today just as He is unchanged. “I send you out to the hungry ones, to feed them and to dress their wounds. Go now and proclaim My truth.”

If you dare to enter territory that has been overgrown and forgotten since creation, then read on...! Because “all things that are reprov'd are made manifest by the light:” and whatever it is that “makes manifest is light. Therefore He says, Awake oh sleeper, arise from the dead, and Christ shall give you light.”<sup>iv</sup>

Examples given in this material pertain to real events and persons; both living and dead. The illustrations remain factual and in certain examples, some details have been excluded that may identify specific persons. Also, because of the candid nature of the discussion, certain names and locations have been changed or intentionally omitted in order to protect the privacy, and in some cases, the identities of these individuals.

The Physical Manifestation of An Individual's State of Being Through Increased Experience

As an individual gains experience through their perception of reality which is gained through manifestation, it becomes possible to increase their awareness. By facing "impossible" situations which they themselves can do nothing about, the individual is able to make sudden and drastic shifts of awareness by moving their consciousness from the past and future, into the "now". This is often called a "leap of faith" or a "paradigm shift". It is where the awareness is shifted to the lighter, higher energies, in place of the lower, denser energies. If the person persists in refocusing their awareness onto the new truth of the "now", their experience will complete its work and cause a positive change in manifestation. This change will then shift the perspective to include more positive energies and so the possibility of more positive manifestations. The awareness will be prone to focus on the higher and lighter energies and what occurs over time is that the experience is gradually cleansed of the lower denser energies. The "perception" will view this as a process of manifestations where you increase in "levels" of experience and awareness and gain a sort of mastery of these. It is, however, a continuous process. You are either clouding your experience with lower denser energies and so limiting your eventual possible manifestations by living a phantom life in the past or future, or you are clearing your experience with the higher and lighter energies and so increasing your eventual possibilities of manifestation by living "in the moment" of "now".

Chapter 8
Awareness

*"If the doors of perception were cleansed everything would appear to man as it is:
infinite."* —William Blake

Awareness

In the above graphic, ultimate truth, or the experience of the nature and character of God is represented as an ellipse. A person's awareness of this truth will affect the physical manifestation that is experienced by that individual. These three, awareness, manifestation, and experience; function together to form the vehicle of perception, represented here as the vertical rectangle. The perception is the rectangle. The interior of the rectangle is the experience. The top of the rectangle which is experiencing a limited exposure to ultimate truth is the awareness. The bottom of the rectangle would be the manifestation in the physical realm. These four distinct areas, coexist and operate together. Each affects and supports the other. The rectangle operates like an old fashioned telescope with the eye piece at the bottom where manifestation takes place. The awareness end is pointed at whatever you desire to view. If the awareness is pointed somewhere within the ellipse of ultimate truth, then the individual will receive a physical manifestation of ultimate truth. If, however, the awareness end of perception were to fall to an area outside the ellipse of ultimate truth, then manifestations that are in conflict with the nature and character of God will manifest in the physical realm. As already noted, the four areas of awareness, manifestation, experience, and perception function together like the old style telescope, but the person using the telescope can choose what to point it at. They can choose to focus their perception on ultimate truth or they can swing it outside the ellipse of ultimate truth and view whatever they desire. Depending on where they focus the awareness end, will determine what manifests within the physical realm. You do not change by force the physical realm, you reposition and refocus the awareness on the desired end result and when this occurs you change your experience. This new experience changes your very being which now includes the new focus and this, in turn, determines what you will experience as a physical outcome and manifestation. You should never attempt to affect change by force or control. These are a treadmill of negative energies and are in conflict with the nature and character of God. To effect lasting change, you must become the desired change within your being. This is accomplished by focusing your perception on ultimate truth. You become aware of the ultimate everlasting truth and this experience changes your state of being. When this occurs, it determines the physical outcome of what is possible for physical manifestation in your reality. Your physical reality, is a result of your state of being that is derived from your awareness.

Ultimate Truth

The circular graphic below represents eight possible areas of "ultimate truth" and how they are partially viewed and experienced through perception. (This is by no means a "complete" representation of ultimate truth, but is only a visual example.)

Lets examine three familiar areas of perception:

- The Ultimate Truth of Health.
- The Ultimate Truth of Abundance and Prosperity.
- The Ultimate Truth of Salvation.

The shaded areas within the circle represent one's experience of the ultimate truth which is gained through a distorted perception and which has an awareness of parts of the truth of God's nature and character, but which does not understand or align with this completely. Perception is indicated by the darker lines that run along side of the shaded areas of experience within the circle. Perception is the "container" where experience exists.

The shaded areas outside the circle represent the manifestation that occurs in one's physical reality as a result of the limited awareness. These shaded areas can manifest aspects of the nature and character of God when connected to the experience of "being", or they can manifest characteristics that are contrary to the nature and character of God when "experience" of that truth is incomplete or absent. When the experience of ultimate truth is incomplete or absent, the awareness is severely limited and it becomes possible to manifest things which are not the will and purpose of God.

A person in this state of perception would manifest into their particular reality sickness and disease. They would have limited financial resources while here in the earth, but they have an understanding of salvation through Christ and would go to heaven. Their lack of experience and distorted perceptions severely limit the Ultimate truth of God's nature and character from physical manifestation. This also opens the door for manifestations that are not aligned with the nature and character of God to manifest things like sickness, disease, lack, debt, poverty, and low self esteem. A person in this state would have a very limited awareness of ultimate truth due to the distorted and restricted dictates of what the person "sees" through perception.
