

True Worship

Many times, Christians live unfulfilled lives and go to church on Sunday and try to work up some emotional response to “worship” God and thank Him for what He has done. This is not true worship. This is just an attempt to fulfill the charge to worship God. True worship is when you experience the desired manifestation of God’s Presence through your life and are genuinely grateful for the results. Worship is a natural response when you live in the “now” moment. When you understand and enter the process, things will begin to just “fall into place. This experience of synchronicity and serendipity will produce an innate desire to worship God. You will be excited that you can have exactly what you desire and this will make you intrinsically grateful toward God, because it is His power that produces your increase and not your own.

Real worship of God flows from your life and state of “being” when you remain in His process and manifest abundance in your life. It is not something that you have to “work up” in your emotions. Real worship will be from your spirit and it will be based in God’s truth.¹ Worship is a spiritual quality of gratitude that innately flows back to God. The word worship means to kiss, like a dog licking his master’s hand.² Worship of God is like a loyal dog showing appreciation for all that the master has done for him.

My cat, Templeton, was the first of the three cats that I adopted to “warm up” to me. As a tiny kitten she began meeting me at the door every time I would arrive home. I noticed that she was just so happy and appreciative that I would show her love and affection. She had never known this kind of love and acceptance before the adoption. She had been a skittish little barn cat up to that point. She was ecstatic to find that I would be so loving with her. She rubbed up against my boots and swam in my arms with delight as she sounded out many “purrs in her furs”. That is what worship of God is meant to be—to swim delightfully in His unconditional acceptance and provision.

A believer must maintain that his strength and power come from God. He improves the quality of life and revelation for himself and others by his very nature and character. He has been lifted above the lower, denser energies that create pain, and has been restored to relationship with God. You cannot hide this kind of person. He is very much like a large city that is built on top of a hill. At night, the light of that city shines in the darkness for all to see. You can not hide it and you can not hide or ignore the life and revelation that beams out of a true believer who is in partnership with God.

The way in which he became elevated is by entering God's process and not allowing his self will and mental disposition to rule him. He literally considers his self will and thought processes to be like a beggar that cringes and crouches down. The self will is too distressed to bring about the will and purpose of God. It is only by shutting this down at the appropriate time that he has been able to be lifted above the pain and sense of separation.

As a result, he is happier than most. Not only is he happier, he is supremely blessed, fortunate, and well off. This individual is supremely blessed, fortunate, and well off even when he suffers grief and cries. Whenever an emotional pain or trauma occurs, God works through the Holy Spirit to call these individuals near Him. He invites the person to receive consolation. He is never separated from Him or his desire.

Because God cares for these special ones so much, they are supremely blessed, fortunate, and well off, through their mild and humble way of life. They are an heir to the very soil of the earth. The entire globe and its occupants have been given to them by the Father.

When it comes to the righteousness that God has provided for these people, you would think that they were famished with hunger and have no way to quench their thirst. They just can't seem to get enough of God's justification. But as they continually remain in God's process, they are supplied in abundance over and over. It is as though God prepared a protected garden or pasture of righteousness for them to gorge on.

With so much righteousness, it becomes their nature to be kindhearted and empathetic to others. It just flows out of them and what they plant is what grows. A new harvest of mercy is always ripening. Staying in the process makes their thoughts and emotions “clean” of the resistance of the “flesh”. They use their mind and emotions for the right purposes, and this makes it easy for them to see exactly how to administer the law by their dominion and authority. They are called the sons of God, and they tend to always “make peace” or “make prosperity” in everything that they do.

At times there are those who rise up to constantly afflict or injure these sons of God. Many make it their aim to pursue and distress them. Satan is behind it all. Those who do not have righteousness hate the ones that have it. The truth is though, even in this affliction and persecution, they are supremely blessed, fortunate, and well off. Through their trouble, they are happier than those who afflict them. These misguided pawns of Satan don't understand that the sons of God have been elevated up to another realm. Their relationship to God through the Holy Spirit and by the work of Christ; has made them the heir of heaven. This fact doesn't change even if other people taunt or defame them. There will always be those who speak evil and hurtful utterances because they cannot stand the Presence of God.

The sons of God are not upset by these things. They are always cheerful and calmly happy. They know they are well off, and when they get to thinking and feeling this, they often jump for joy because they know that God is going to pay them for their services in heaven. Besides, these same types of people have always existed and persecuted God's children.

Believers of this sort are full of the Presence of God. They are the salt of the earth, but they are only of value if they retain God's Presence and demonstrate this before men so that people will praise God. They have become the light of the world that shines into mankind's darkness. You can't hide a true believer. They are like a city which is built on the top of a hill. No matter which direction you come at them, they are visible. They exude God's Presence and this makes those who practice evil very uncomfortable. Their dark works are exposed by the power of God's nature and character that flows through the believer.³

The Work Of Christ

Scripture verses and text describe exactly what the work of Christ did for anyone who will believe on Him as Lord and Savior! This simple article describes in easy to understand terms how to apply the work of Christ to your life and situation.

The Blessing Of Abraham

Did you know that the covenant God made with Abraham is still in force today for any believer who will take advantage of it? As a believer, you are actually “blessed” with every spiritual blessing and you are delivered from every aspect of the curse! However, the enemy is attempting to steal your blessing by taking legal action in the courtroom of heaven. This article tells you how to stop him and gain God’s promised blessing.

Speaking “TO” The Mountain

Telling God about your problems will NEVER bring about the desired end result that you are seeking. Begging God to heal you will never get you healed. Only by understanding, and then exercising, the authority that God has granted you in the earth can you achieve your desire. Find out how to change your situation and understand what Jesus meant when He told his disciples to speak “to” the mountain of their circumstance.

Defining True Worship

If you think that “worship” is what we do on Sunday morning before the pastor brings his message—you need to read this little article. Worship comes from our state of being and success in fulfilling God’s purpose in the earth. It is not an emotionally charged workout that comes from singing a few choruses. Find out what “true” worship is all about!

Understanding Addiction

This series is designed to introduce lay counselors to the topic of addiction. It is taught by the author who is a former Addiction’s Counselor.

Counselors will learn what factors determine addiction and how to treat this.

The presentation is intended to help any counselor gain a quick overview of addiction and it provides practical, specific interventions that even a beginning counselor can use.

Understanding The "Now" Moment

God exists; but God is in heaven and we are in the earth. How do we reach God? He has provided a process of entering into relationship with Him by the Holy Spirit and through the work of Christ. God has done everything to restore us to relationship with Him but we must enter His process. In order to reach God we must come to the place where He is waiting for us—the “now” moment! Unless we enter the “now” we cannot hope for much more than a sporadic anointing or success. The Holy Spirit wants to connect you to the Father; do you know how to reach the place He is waiting for you? Find out in this article!
